Hensley Meulens: Former big leaguer will enter his 2nd season of professional coaching in 2011, serving as hitting coach. ... In his 1st year as hitting coach for Giants last season he helped tutor offense to .257 batting average (1,411-for-5,488), which ranked 7th in NL

Joe Panik: A shortstop at John Jay-East Fishkill High School in Hopewell Junction, N.Y., Panik played his way to St. John's, where he entered the 2011 season as arguably the top-ranked shortstop in the nation. It was the San Francisco Giants, though, that selected him 29th overall, not his favorite team, the Yankees. That, of course, is just fine with the 21-year-old, who hit .341 in the Northwest League and was named the circuit's Most Valuable Player this summer. The Giants sent Panik to the Arizona Fall League, where he's seeing time at second base and hanging around some of baseball's brightest stars.
